Description

Please join me for this year's "Master Class for Principals." During four sessions we will tackle the following topics: Choosing and achieving annual goals for your division, building and sustaining TRUST with various constituencies (parents, faculty, students and other administrators), succeeding as a middle manager even when you don't hold all the cards, and running "difficult" meetings with faculty or parents. The sessions will be a combination of "workshop presentation" and conversation among what will be an extremely talented group of Colorado administrators.

About the presenter

Bill Wolf-Tinsman is the executive director of Think Like a Principal Consulting and was a school administrator for 34 years serving as summer school director, director of professional development, assistant principal, director of curriculum, and assistant to the head of school for special projects at the Kent Denver School, Greenwich Country Day School and Colorado Academy. For twenty-nine of those years, Bill served as principal at Greenwich Country Day School and Colorado Academy. Most recently, Bill has served as a consultant with the Association of Colorado Independent Schools and as a mentor for principals. A graduate of Williams College with a master's in education from Harvard University, he believes firmly that principals drive the creation of healthy school cultures and enable student success. "No matter how many years I served students, I always believed that I could improve my craft year over year."
