

THE SOCIAL INSTITUTE

How Innovative Schools are Addressing Social Media, Current Events, and Technology

When: Friday, December 9, 2022 from 9:00-10:15 a.m. MDT

Where: Virtual on Zoom

Session description- Everyday, students are hit with social media posts, comments from friends, changing tech trends, and a variety of pressures. Schools try to support student well-being to foster productive learning environments, but when educators implement this life skills programming, it's easy to make mistakes. This topic is complicated and nuanced, and educators find themselves working in a space that might be totally new to them — and rapidly evolving. Drawing upon results from the world's largest school survey about students and social media and their experience in empowering educators through modern-day life skills and setting them up for sustained success, TSI will lead an engaging and interactive discussion about how to avoid common mistakes when addressing student well-being and facilitate effective whole-student development lessons.

Chelsea Lopez is a digital native with over 5 years of experience in education, K-8. She began her teaching career as a Special Education teacher before taking on the role of Intervention Coordinator. In her time in education, she was also a middle school cheerleading coach, softball coach, and assistant athletic director. Currently, she is an Account Executive at The Social Institute, helping develop partnerships with schools across the country. She has presented at CSCA, NWAIS, and other leading education conferences.

Please register for this free webinar online at www.acischools.org

For more information, contact ACIS at (303) 444-2201.