In a rapidly evolving educational landscape, a fresh leadership approach is vital for Colorado's independent schools—one that embraces change, prioritizes stakeholders, and confidently navigates toward a compelling future. Kari Granger will unveil four critical shifts pivotal to Stakeholder Leadership. We will delve into the complexities of stakeholder behavior, provide strategies to dismantle organizational silos, and recognize the distinct experiences of the 'top,' 'middle,' and 'front-line' individuals in the system. Join us for this transformative session filled with actionable insights and practical tools. Depart with a rich understanding of this innovative approach leadership and be ready to steer your school into the future.

Transitions Ahead

Debra Wilson

Evolution and transitions are inevitable in the nonprofit world, and NAIS is embracing both in this complex time in education. Join the new president of NAIS, Debra Wilson, as she shares the key issues on her mind and how she sees NAIS evolving to address these issues and serve its member schools. This session is an invitation to further engagement as the national association looks forward to the exciting challenges ahead.

② The Antifragile Educator and Leader – Thriving in Challenging Times

Pascale Losambe

In recent reports, alarming trends have emerged, revealing that teachers, leaders, and especially DEIB practitioners are facing unprecedented levels of burnout and exhaustion. The ever-changing educational landscape, combined with the complexities of fostering diversity, equity, inclusion, and belonging, has placed tremendous strain on these essential professionals.

In this transformative session, we delve into the concept of becoming "antifragile" as educators and leaders. Rather than merely surviving in the face of adversity, we will explore how to thrive in the current climate.

Drawing on the principles of antifragility, which suggest that certain systems grow stronger and more resilient through exposure to stressors, this session offers practical tools, strategies, and insights to empower educators, trustees, and DEIB practitioners to navigate challenges with resilience, purpose, and renewed passion.

③ National Legal and Governance Trends: Looking Back and Ahead

Megan Mann

In this interactive session, NAIS General Counsel, Megan Mann, will review the legal, risk management, and governance trends that independent schools across the country experienced during the 2022-23 school year, as well as those we see developing as we head toward 2024. This session will cover a broad range of topics, including board education and development, the focus on school safety and security, affirmative action in the news, as well as trends related to key school documents, policies, and protocols. Megan will include "table top exercises" to help school heads and trustees explore the trends through real-world scenarios, and she will gladly take questions throughout the session. She welcomes interactive dialogue, and will offer practical tips for school leaders.

PRESENTATION DESCRIPTIONS

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 13, 2023

Morning Presentations (continued) | 10:30-11:45 am

④ Culture and Compensation: How to Empower Your Faculty Josh Cobb and Juan Botello

During the pandemic, schools embraced change out of necessity and learned how flexibility and adaptability were key to their success in an uncertain environment. Now, as schools look toward the horizon, most hope to sustain those attributes to propel other necessary innovations. Specifically, this presentation examines how innovative compensation systems can inspire a dynamic, collaborative, and positive faculty culture. While reviewing a three-year process of shifting from a scaled salary structure to a unique banded system, the presenters from Graland Country Day School will describe how that change requires faculty input, financial resources, and community support.

⑤ Futureproofing Your School Through Board-Head Partnership Greg Bamford

Trustees know that their primary role is to hold the school in trust and to steward it into the future. However, many boards are focused on the present and – at best! – think about the next 5-7 years.

Thinking like futurists helps boards and heads consider a longer time horizon and shape the future, not simply react to it. Futurists don't predict the future. They consider many possible futures, focus on what is probable, and design towards a preferred future. Futurists use their imagination to consider how small signals might evolve to become mainstream trends. They test their thinking with scenarios. Because this kind of thinking enables a higher degree of cognitive flexibility, they respond to novel circumstances with greater confidence and less anxiety. And because futurist thinking is inherently collaborative, it can lead to stronger partnerships between boards and heads.

We believe that boards and heads should regularly engage in futurist thinking as a path to generative governance and more robust strategic planning. This interactive workshop will introduce attendees to core concepts of futurist thinking, have the opportunity to practice a futurist thinking on a small scale, and identify ways that futurist thinking can lead to more generative – and fulfilling – partnership between heads and boards.

⑥ The School Safety Partners We Too Often Leave Out: Engaging your Board in Safety Chris Joffe

Boards are deeply involved in our schools, and are invaluable partners for everything from fundraising to academics. But there's one area most schools have not deeply engaged their boards in: safety and security. In this session, we'll discuss why this matters, what board members bring to the table, and how school leaders can more deeply and appropriately engage their board leadership in their safety and security strategy.

Afternoon Presentations | 1:45-3:00 pm

① Authentic Partnerships Mary Carrasco

Join us for a conversation with two heads of school and leadership donors to learn more about how authentic partnerships that develop into gifts with true impact. GG+A Senior Vice President Mary Carrasco will lead the conversation with a group of ACIS heads and donors.

② The Antifragile Educator and Leader – Thriving in Challenging Times Pascale Losambe

See description under morning session.

③ National Legal and Governance Trends: Looking Back and Ahead Megan Mann

See description under morning session.

④ Brave Conversations During Election Season (and Beyond!) Greg Bamford

Educators are anxiously anticipating the fall election. The 2016 and 2020 elections were disruptive and rancorous in many schools, reflecting a deeply divided country. Fast forward to 2024, and election season will likely test our school communities. However, if we can get past the understandable anxiety, we have an opportunity to strengthen our communities through conversation and connection.

In this conversation, we'll reflect on the lessons of the last two election cycles, discuss the dynamics that make the 2024 presidential election particularly challenging, and offer some tools for creating spaces where students can get better at navigating conflict and challenging conversations.

In this workshop, Greg will share some of the elements from Leadership + Design's Design for Election Week curriculum: in particular, the Pause/Reflect/Repair protocol for challenging conversations, the value of proactively offering norms to ground conversations, and an exploration of the distinctions between being non-partisan and being neutral as schools support inclusion and belonging in their communities.

⑤ The Fundamental Principles of Crisis Leadership Chris Joffe

Crises are known to have myriad issues blended together and launched at the crisis leaders at the speed of... crisis. How do you know which data presented to you are action-worthy versus which are artifact? What decisions should you make swiftly? What decisions allow time for analysis-paralysis? How does one escape analysis-paralysis once it's recognized? How might we consolidate the perspectives of multiple leaders into a single, decisive, organizational perspective? In this session participants will be able to understand key lessons from recent active shooter events with a focus on preparedness and response, define the core leadership principles of keeping students safe, as we contemplate the spectrum of possibility over the next 5 years.
